Would you like to join us for a Language Teacher Training Course in Second Life?

As a part of the European funded AVALON (Access to Virtual and Action Learning Live Online) project, we are looking for experienced language teachers who are interested in participating in a Language Teacher Training Course in Second Life.

You do not need any previous experience using Second Life though you should have experience using computers and digital technologies and an interest in the ways technology can be effectively used in language teaching.

The course will run for 6 weeks (50 hours) and will start mid-February 2010. It will be offered on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. You will work both in Second Life and with online resource materials.

The course will be free to participants and you will be guided by five experienced Second Life teachers. At the end of the course you will receive a certificate.
